SEATTLE LEADERS IN LAW

Going The Distance

No matter how complex the case, Maxwell Graham Injury Attorneys are ready to fight until the end for its clients.

“Our clients are trying to put their lives back together after a terrible accident or injury often caused by someone else’s negligence,” says Rebecca Graham, managing partner at Maxwell Graham Injury Attorneys. “We have a reputation for taking on extremely complex cases where people have frequently been seriously hurt or killed. These cases sometimes take years to resolve. Our entire team spends a lot of time getting to know our clients because we care about them and how their injuries have impacted their lives and the lives of their families.”

Founded in 2013, Maxwell Graham has become one of the leading personal injury firms in the Northwest. With more than 50 years of combined legal experience, the team has represented hundreds of clients in cases ranging from medical malpractice to dangerous road design. Unlike many other personal injury firms, where the priority is often negotiating a speedy settlement, Maxwell Graham specializes in intense investigation and litigation to recover the maximum possible compensation.

“Our clients are facing an incredibly tough situation,” says Michael Maxwell, Graham’s husband of 30 years and the firm’s other founding partner. “These are people who are facing lifelong challenges, from tragedies like traumatic brain injuries, or the loss of a family member. Clients have a lot at stake, and they have to navigate an adversarial legal system where the outcome is uncertain. We’re asking them to put a lot of trust in us.”

Clients have good reason to trust Maxwell Graham. In the last decade, the firm has won hundreds of millions of dollars in judgments and settlements for its clients, taking the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs, Washington

State Department of Transportation, major corporations, King County, and many other high-profile institutions, businesses, and insurance providers. The firm has successfully argued cases before the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit and the Washington Supreme Court, notably winning a $10 million judgment in a medical malpractice suit in both venues.

“That was a case where we had to go the distance,” Maxwell recalls. “We won at every trial and appeal, and the entire time the opposition was trying to get our client to accept less money than she had been awarded. Most lawyers would have recommended that she take the money. Our client was very hard up, and even a little bit of money would have gone a long way. We told her to hold out, and she trusted us. As a result, she was paid every dollar that she was owed.”

These cases have helped Maxwell Graham become known throughout the state for its fierce and unrelenting advocacy for its clients.

“We’re the lawyers that people come to when no one else wants to take the case,” says Graham.

“These are uphill battles against gigantic, powerful insurance companies, well-respected professionals, and government institutions. We’re not intimidated by them. Once we dig our heels in to get justice for our clients, we don’t let go. That persistence has allowed us to get some pretty phenomenal results.”
